D10 Trust Government: Federal

People have different ideas about how much they can trust government to do what is right. These ideas do not refer to Democrats or Republicans in particular, but just to the government in general. We want to see how you feel about this for each of the levels of government.

How much of the time do you think you can trust the federal government in Washington to do what is right -- nearly always or most of the time, some of the time, seldom, or almost never?

The following is a hypothetical scenario. Suppose policymakers decide that there are two approaches to increasing the quality of Michigan's drinking water. The first is to restrict agricultural practices, which will increase the cost consumers pay for food. The second is to require water suppliers to install special filters that remove pollution from tap water, which will increase household water bills. Alternately, policymakers can do nothing and hope the water supply remains safe.

Would you rather policymakers enact new farm restrictions that will increase your food cost by 25 dollars a month, policymakers enact new water safety legislation that will increase your water bill by 5 dollars a month, or policymakers do nothing and hope the water supply remains safe?

Water Quality: Restrictions C

The following is a hypothetical scenario. Suppose policymakers decide that there are two approaches to increasing the quality of Michigan's drinking water. The first is to restrict agricultural practices, which will increase the cost consumers pay for food. The second is to require water suppliers to install special filters that remove pollution from tap water, which will increase household water bills. Alternately, policymakers can do nothing and hope the water supply remains safe.

Would you rather policymakers enact new farm restrictions that will increase your food cost by 25 dollars a month, policymakers enact new water safety legislation that will increase your water bill by 25 dollars a month, or policymakers do nothing and hope the water supply remains safe?

Water Quality: Restrictions D
